

Most-talked-about family planning publications of 2021

Overview

This list highlights the ten family planning articles published in 2021 that have received the most attention in 2021 from academics, traditional and social media, and other sources, ranked in order of their Altmetric Attention Score on December 3, 2021. These publications were identified through a keyword search in Altmetric using the terms "abortion" and "contraception."

We are proud to see so many members of the Society of Family Planning listed as key authors on these publications; in the list on the next page, we have identified each of these community members to honor their contributions to the field of family planning.

Please note that the Altmetric icon colors represent different sources of attention. The amount of each color in the "donuts" (which are active links to the Altmetric listings for each publication) will change depending on the sources from which a publication has received attention.

The Altmetric Attention Score in the center of each "donut" is a calculated, weighted count of the attention a publication has received. It is based on three factors: 1) volume—the number of people mentioning the research; 2) sources—the weighted contributions of different types of sources; and 3) authors—including how often they mention scholarly articles, the breadth of journals to which they have contributed, and their audience. So, for example:

This research has received a great deal of mainstream media coverage.

This research has received much of its attention from blogs and has been referenced in public policy documents.

This research has received a great deal of attention on Twitter and also been reviewed on a post-publication peer review forum.
